It is also a huge encouragement to see so many people from Hong Kong visiting Japan as the country deals with the aftermath of the Great East Japan Earthquake and does its utmost to revitalize itself following the disaster.

There may be some people who remain concerned about radiation levels in Japan. But radiation readings in Tokyo are not high compared with cities in other countries, including Hong Kong, and levels are normal throughout most of Japan (excluding a few specific areas). For more information on this, see the link below.
